The results

The iF Design Award 2026 results were announced on 24 February. This year's competition drew 10 003 entries from 68 countries. Both products passed the online preselection in December 2025 and went on to the final jury: 129 independent design experts who judged the products in hand. Three jurors scored each entry on idea, form, function, differentiation and sustainability. Circular C2 scored 340 of 500 points, Cylindric UX1 295. The threshold for an award was 275 points. The winners will be celebrated in Berlin on 27 April.

The two products

Cylindric UX1 is a charger for the table. Four USB-C ports share 165 W, with up to 100 W from a single port. The braided cable is 1.8 m long.

Circular C2 is a power strip for the floor. Four sockets sit in a round body, 124 mm across. Its braided cable winds into the base and adjusts in length up to 1.6 m.

Both come in the five colours of the Cords® Color System: Jet Black, Mist White, Sand, Pale Pink and Electric Orange.

“The objects we see every day shape how a room feels. A power strip on the floor is no different from a lamp or a chair, so it deserves the same attention.”
